

We give due space to subjects that will be pursued with more interest than anything else we publish to-day, the orders of the War Department setting forth the mode and manner of the DRAFT to take place in a few days time. The one we publish is sent to Governor Salmon of Wisconsin, though identical with that sent to all the other states, will be read with particular interest by various classes of our citizens. The sneaks, now prominent in Washington, will be exposed by a vigilante band of federal officers, will re-act with grim frankness. The disloyal will shirk their duty, and find it hard to call to positive virtue that negative conduct.

Loyal men will rejoice, not as a luxury, but as it is otherwise than repulsive to them; but it will be welcomed as a strong remedy for a violent disease. Medicines applied firmly and thoroughly, to the cure of national ills. Every loyal man feels and knows that all this should have come before. Months ago the people and the War Department were wasting away in the field, that many of them were reduced below half their original effective strength. It was known, too, that recruiting these regiments by volunteering was simply impossible. Every man who has had the opportunity for observation, will accept the fact without question.

It was seen that the men were sending away to us, we could not, but did not avail ourselves of the option of drafting to keep their army full. We have begun now, and better late than never.

We are gratified further that an opportunity will be afforded to some of our countrymen to do something for their country, shall they have responded to our appeals for volunteers. And while this draft will be a good thing, if we can get enough to fill our regiments, and keep this homely reform. Either make through work, or leave the whole question to the chapter of accidents, which will one day settle it satisfactorily.

THE TENNESSEE PRISONERS.

An energetic article, returning home, or rather the release of that sentiment, is furnished in the disposition made for some past by the Tennessee prisoners of war in this city and Indianapolis. The prospect of a near exchange has not made these men happy. At Camp Morton a few days since, 2,800 of them were given a furlough, and again being forced into rebel ranks. There is no heart in a war into which they were originally driven at the point of the bayonet, and their term as prisoners in our hands has been far less distasteful than the rebel camp.

With these facts existing, there is no mistaking in the fact, that the safety of the North and South, that there was no principle of law, or right, at stake, that will be to maintain the belligerents implacable enemies—and that the Union has already passed the point of permanent disruption. In one sense, the war did grow out of a misunderstanding, but not in the sense conveyed by the reasoning of the British co-laborers of the rebel slave power. A misconception, a fatal error, on the part of the Southerners. The draft is here, and a few days will see it perfected. There is still time for volunteering, the most honorable of all exemptions.

CAUSE OF THE UNDERSTANDING.

Leading British journals persist in saying that the present war grew out of a "misunderstanding" between the North and the South;—that there was no principle of law, or right, at stake, that will be to maintain the belligerents implacable enemies—and that the Union has already passed the point of permanent disruption. In one sense, the war did grow out of a misunderstanding, but not in the sense conveyed by the reasoning of the British co-laborers of the rebel slave power. A misconception, a fatal error, on the part of the Southerners. The draft is here, and a few days will see it perfected. There is still time for volunteering, the most honorable of all exemptions.

MAJOR FRED. W. MATTESON:

Duth who "loves a shaming mark" is a goliath among our officers. He will be mown through a wide circle of friends. He died as a soldier deserves to die on duty, and as the soldier most deserves to die in death. There is no need, however, of even the smallest sacrifice to establish the valor and nobleness of Major Fred. W. Mattoon.

A son of Governor Matteson of this State, he had all the qualities of a soldier, and his name will be heard among his contemporaries.

He was a graduate of one of our eastern colleges, Yale, we believe, where he excelled in every branch of study, and won a scholarship among his class.

He was a student at the U. S. Naval Academy.
